Your knowledge and experiences	My platform ... "Future World" ... is dedicated to the sustainable development of an ideal future. I have a science degree in Sustainable Development and have devoted 50 years to research and development of systems and methods to build a new society. Included in this process is the Department of Corrective Services, which includes (without limitation) the imprisonment and rehabilitation of women and girls. I have worked within a maximum security prison (Parklea in NSW) and have had success in the work of rehabilitation during the 1980's. My platform is focused on building a new society rather than trying to mend the old one. The analogy is trying to clean a window with mud. From my experience of 30 years of doing this, I realized it doesn't work. To these ends, "Future World" is dedicated to develop a sustainable prototype eco-

village in the Redlands area of Brisbane as an experimental structure to base a new approach to life. When established, this prototype aims to replicate itself and thereby expand its range of services to support the criminal justice system, reduce recidivism and benefit society. We aim to achieve this by various means outlined in "World Peace Game for adults", which is an A to Z representation of the new world view and approach to life based on the ideas of Fritjof Capra, Buckminster Fuller, Ken Wilber, Krishnamurti, Eckhart Tolle and others of like-mind. Of prime concern in our work is the overall structure that women and girls ... and for that matter "all people" ... are conditioned to accept. It is hard to accept that this conditioning is another word for "programming". We in the West are programmed much the same as those in the East. Proof of the pudding are the children of Eastern descent brought up within a Western society and visa versa. It is the programming ... which is derived by the surrounding culture ... that largely shapes our thoughts and behaviour. The prototype communities developed by Future World intends to embody programs that will ... from birth ... ensure that all resident children are free from most or all of the social and economic problems that plague conventional society. As for adults who have already been programmed ... this is a much harder problem. However for those who are willing and open to listen and learn, World Peace Game will build a composite system, which combines the ideas and systems of such authors as listed above as if to solve a jig-saw puzzle. Imagine then if the children in our intentional eco-village sneak a peak at pornography and all the rest of it ... (possibly by age seven or even younger). Before long they will have joined Tinder, will have been tempted with drugs of every description and will become a festering sore within our community. This would not be of the design of the adults but due to contamination from social media, from mobile phones and the internet and by forming social connections with others, who embody and are governed by detrimental programming. A similar problem confronted Mahatma Gandhi. Gandhi knew that India did not know "poverty" for 5000 years. India thrived by subsistence farming and never considered themselves poor. It was only when India became Westernized that ... in comparison to the objects of possession and greed ... Indians had virtually nothing and were then judged as "poor". Thus poverty was invented by the West. It was one culture over-riding another. Along a parallel basis ... in the development of a future world ... to what extent will the media and the critics of our first prototype be squealing that we are a "cult" ... that we are brainwashing our children by not allowing them access to the internet and by isolating them from the programming of the (contaminated) normal world? In our definition of a "child" ... "a child ceases being a child at age 13. At that point, the child becomes a teenager. There is a distinct difference, even though the media won't admit it". At a given point, within our intentional community, teenagers will have access to the sick world of social media ... (sick by way of all the porn, doof, alcohol and drugs) ... but not before they are capable of discerning the difference between one program and another. If not ... access will be denied ... or if the teenager is old enough to leave the community, they can leave and ... if they want ... they can become a drug addict or alcoholic. At 18, teenagers are largely free to do as they will ... and accept the consequences thereof. At least by age 18, any teenager from our intentional community would be less likely to be a menace to themselves or others. There is an old saying ... "monkey see, monkey do". Given that the adults of our community would not be watching porn, taking drugs, drinking alcohol or engaging in violence or criminal activities ... the children and teens would not embody the same programming. The main basis of guidance for our system can be found here ... <http://soul1.org> ... whereby this above-mentioned "programming" can be seen as "miasma of the human aura". It is not so much by the acquisition of thought-forms that one expands in consciousness but by dumping it. In other words ... "by de-programming". The problem is, education and culture (along with the media and social networks) don't do that. They keep accumulating more and more thought-forms which is why we have such a divisive society. Diversity is great, but you don't benefit from diversity by building divisiveness. World Peace Game for adults is based on the expansion of consciousness by those few who are prepared to dedicate themselves to the work. These few will become the leaders of our system ... rather than "wisdom of the crowd" ... because "the crowd" will gravitate to the lowest common denominator. Our future needs to gravitate in the opposite direction ... for this, one should come up to speed with Ken Wilber and his integral movement. Just Google it. Only this new way of living ... as it gradually emerges ... will serve as a sufficient means to address and correct the violence, crime and sickness of our society.
